Ernest C. Meyer, district superintendent of the Red Cross nursing survey for the Atlantic division, was in this city Wednesday to investigate the progress of the survey being made here. Mr. Meyer was disappointed to find that more of the questionnaires had not been filled out and is desirous that all who have not returned them will do so as soon as possible. It is expected that the nurses realize that the filling out of the questionnaire puts them under no obligation they will forward them immediately to Miss Alice Alford, local chairman.

DANIELSON

Anselm Meunier, 21, died Wednesday a few minutes after noon, at his home on Main street. He had been ill with influenza and pneumonia for nearly a month, so ill that for days his recovery was despaired of, but he finally rallied and at the beginning of the present week there was a promise that he might recover. A sinking spell, however, was followed by unconsciousness and early Wednesday it was realized that the end was near. Mr. Meunier was born in Waukegan, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Benoni Meunier, one of a large family. He came to Danielson with his parents when he was very young and grew to manhood here, being one of the borough's best known young men. "Babe" was to his scores of friends, who are grieving over his death.

At the time he became ill he was employed in the store of A. P. Woodward. As a member of the Sixth Separate company, State guard, rifle team, he went to Norwich on Saturday in October to participate in the annual shooting exhibition of that city and upon his return here his condition had become so serious that he required the immediate attention of a physician. His condition rapidly grew critical and he made the bravest kind of a fight for life, up to the last minute that he was conscious, death finally claimed him.

Mr. Meunier was a former student of Killington high school and had played on its athletic teams, much to the advantage of the school. He also had been member of independent basketball teams and other athletic organizations, competing the last time on Labor day, at the Connecticut Mills field day.

His wife, his father and mother were at his bedside when he died. In addition to these relatives and an infant he leaves eight brothers, two of whom, Harold and Elmer, are in the army service of the United States, and three sisters.

With the smoke of battle cleared away Wednesday, there was general agreement among the people of this town that the killing of Mr. Young represented in the coming legislature. Close observers of political affairs in Killington attribute much of the republican party's success here to the day's election to the strength and the standing of its two candidates for representative—Comer A. Young, of Danielson, and N. Lorne Greig, of Danville. Both are well known, chosen friends of mercantile and industrial endeavor and both are men who have the full confidence of their townsmen.

Mr. Young is a native of Killington and for 20 years has been engaged in business in Danielson. He is one of the best known of the borough's business men and his activity is very generally recognized. In his early days he was a school teacher and, perhaps, that fact remains firmly implanted in the minds of many young people who studied under him, especially the "big" boys who, in those days, sometimes had an ambition to "lick" the teacher. It is not to be construed from this that Mr. Young was over-assertive, but there remains in towns hereabouts more than one man in middle life who will smile and admit that Mr. Young invariably was the master of the situation in the schoolroom; and who always paying high tribute to his efficient teacher, can hardly forebear to recall a few classic instances wherein Mr. Young gave convincing demonstration to unruly pupils as to why he was. His school room days as a teacher covered a period of 15 years, seven of which were spent in painstakingly imparting knowledge to the youth of Killington. Five likewise in the town of Brooklyn and four more at Central Valley schools. His pupils of those days, as they remain today, are one big class in paying tribute to him as one of the best teachers they ever had. In later years Mr. Young has demonstrated that the same qualities that made him such a success as a teacher could be applied to the duties of a legislator. He is the son of a farmer and has a keen interest in the welfare of the farmer. He is the treasurer of the Assn. of Woolen companies at Danville. He is one of the most successful of the woolen manufacturers. He is the owner of the concern at Danville with former Senator Angus Park, Hanover, whose daughter is Mr. Greig's wife and they have built up there a big business that means much in maintaining the industrial welfare of Killington. The plant recently being expanded to give it 100,000 capacity. Mr. Greig is chairman of Killington's town school committee and has shown constructive interest in other matters pertaining to the public good. During the period of the war he has been actively engaged in Liberty loan, Red Cross and other patriotic work and has contributed largely to the success of all the money drives in the town. That his abilities have been appreciated by the people of the town was indicated by the fact that he received the highest vote of any of the four candidates for representative, and this in the face of a real determined effort on the part of the democrats to elect their candidates this year.

An effort to curb illegal selling of liquor in Killington during the no-license year that has just opened is the promise of those who have been interested in turning the town away from its habit of voting wet. In the first few days since license went away there has been little to indicate that the law is being very generally violated here, but notwithstanding close observation of conditions will be made, it is said, and those who will not be lawful will be made to pay the penalty.

Swift & Company
Has Not "Jest Grown"

Swift & Company in fifty years of well ordered growth, has become one of the great national services because it has learned to do something for the American people which they needed to have done for them, in the way in which they preferred to have it done.

It has met each successive demand, in the changing conditions of national life, by getting good meat to increasing millions effectively, efficiently, economically, and expeditiously.

The Swift & Company packing plants, refrigerator cars, car routes, branch houses, organization, and personnel of today are the practical solutions, born of practical experience, to the food problems of a half a century.

Because of all of these elements working in correlation and unison, Swift & Company is able to supply more and better meat to more people than would have been possible otherwise, at a net profit per pound of meat so low (a fraction of a cent) that the consumer price is practically unaffected.

Strip away any portion of this vast, smooth-running human machine, and you make a large part of the meat supply uncertain, lose the benefit of half a century of fruitful experience, and scatter the intelligent energies of men who have devoted a life work toward meeting the needs of a nation in one vital field.

The booklet of preceding chapters in the history of the packing industry will be mailed on request to
